High-level plenary segment

A. Opening of the session

2. At the 1st meeting, on 4 February 2010, the President of the sixteenth session of the High-level Committee on South-South Cooperation, the Permanent Representative of Kenya to the United Nations, opened the session and made an introductory statement.

3. At the same meeting, a statement was made by the President of the General Assembly.

4. Also at the same meeting, a statement was made by the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the representative of Qatar in his capacity as former President of the High-level Committee on South-South Cooperation.

B. Introduction of the report on implementation

5. At its 1st and 2nd meetings, on 4 February 2010, the High-level Committee on South-South Cooperation considered item 2 of its agenda.

6. The Director of the Special Unit for South-South Cooperation introduced the report of the High-level United Nations Conference on South-South Cooperation (A/CONF.215/2).

C. Discussion

7. During the general debate of the High-level Committee on South-South Cooperation, delegations reviewed the state of South-South cooperation with a view to implementing the provisions of the Nairobi outcome document (A/CONF.215/1), which was endorsed by Member States at the High-level United Nations Conference on South-South Cooperation on 3 December 2009 and approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 64/222 of 21 December 2009.

8. The key themes to emerge from the debate were the value placed on South-South efforts within international cooperation for development and the principles, characteristics and priority areas of South-South cooperation.

9. As the economic prospects of the South have risen, so have the vitality and strength of cooperation among developing countries. A number of delegations highlighted a significant increase in the recognition of the contribution of South-South cooperation to development among Member States and throughout the United Nations system since the last session of the High-level Committee (29 May-1 June 2007). Some 30 years after the adoption of the Buenos Aires Plan of Action, countries were realizing the fruits of South-South cooperation, which had evolved from a limited exchange of technical expertise to become a significant tool for development. South-South cooperation was seen to contribute towards national well-being, self-sufficiency and the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals. Those encouraging trends served as a reminder that the value of Southern solutions was only just beginning to be recognized.

10. On the whole, countries of the South had achieved significant development gains over recent decades owed in part to South-South and triangular efforts. Some delegations emphasized the critical role of North-South and triangular cooperation in supporting South-South cooperation towards the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, and sustainable development. Developing countries noted their appreciation for the role of developed countries in triangular arrangements and urged developed-country partners to fulfil their promises of support. Although such support was an important component of development success, some countries suggested the need to work towards the elimination of developing-country dependency on North-South cooperation, without undermining its benefits, in order for developing countries to become more self-reliant.

11. In looking at progress in South-South cooperation and the prospects for fulfilling the commitments set forth in the Nairobi outcome document, delegations emphasized national ownership, equality, mutual respect, national sovereignty, mutual benefit, non-conditionality and solidarity as the guiding principles of South-South cooperation. Solidarity was stressed for its capacity to foster greater social inclusion without a loss of sovereignty. Some delegations suggested the need for a better understanding of these concepts in order to increase the effectiveness of South-South cooperation and engage other partners and stakeholders.

12. The unique characteristics distinguishing South-South cooperation from traditional forms of development assistance were noted, including the difference between donor-receiver relations and relationships in South-South cooperation. In this context, some delegations voiced concern about diminishing equality and non-conditionality in some recent South-South efforts and called for stronger adherence to the principles of South-South cooperation. A number of Member States stressed the point that South-South endeavours were not meant to be a substitute for North-South cooperation but instead should complement North-South support.

13. Further to this point, Member States emphasized that South-South cooperation was not and should not be viewed as aid, but as an expression of solidarity based on true partnership for the purpose of mutual development.

14. Some delegations were of the view that the principles of aid effectiveness were at odds with the principles of South-South cooperation and interfered with achieving the goals set forth in the Nairobi outcome document. Some Member States expressed the belief that it was possible to achieve consensus on the principles of South-South cooperation while also following an agenda of aid effectiveness. Others pressed for ending attempts to put conditionalities on South-South cooperation in the tradition of official development assistance, calling those attempts futile and unproductive.

15. In the areas of trade and finance, Member States noted the centrality of South-South cooperation in confronting the challenges faced by developing countries in ensuring full participation in international economic relations. It was widely agreed that South-South cooperation was a vital means of attracting trade and investment.
flows while also promoting increased international financial and technical cooperation.

16. Despite the gains achieved through trade, investment and finance, delegations noted the deepening economic asymmetries among developing countries, particularly in regard to the least developed countries and landlocked developing countries. The debate brought to light the fact that the current financial, food and energy crises had exacerbated the vulnerabilities of the countries that lacked the capacity to withstand shocks. Thus, participants stressed that South-South cooperation should be given priority in the United Nations system to facilitate the achievement of internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, in accordance with the Brussels and Almaty Programmes of Action. Apart from contributing to the achievement of those goals, South-South initiatives were seen as a viable means of decreasing the asymmetries and technical gaps among developing countries, including knowledge gaps.

17. Building and sustaining capacity and mobilizing joint programmes of action among developing countries constituted key challenges in the South. Thus, delegations pointed to the importance of capacity-building among developing countries as a focus area for South-South efforts in order to meet their myriad development needs. Towards this end, some Member States stressed the need to build on the synergies and complementarities among countries of the South in critical areas such as trade, investment, services, and information and communication technologies.

18. In the light of the recent financial, food, energy and climate-change crises, a number of delegations noted that the collective impact of those challenges had diminished the gains achieved by countries in past decades and further threatened the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals by 2015. South-South cooperation had played a pivotal role in assisting developing countries to face those challenges and Member States pledged their continued support for South-South and triangular efforts. Despite that pledge by many Member States, some delegations expressed concern about a lack of political will in supporting developing countries as they worked to solve the current financial crisis.

19. Member States also addressed the topic of the modalities for implementing South-South and triangular efforts, calling for the prioritization of South-South cooperation in their national strategies. Further, it was recommended that countries strengthen their collective efforts to increase not only the quantity of financial resources, but also the quality, efficiency and impact of all forms of cooperation.

20. Noting that the sharing and exchange of experience were key to South-South efforts, delegations called for all development actors to support improved measures for data collection, coordination, dissemination and evaluation of South-South cooperation. The dissemination of results, the sharing of lessons learned and good practices, and the replication of experiences were encouraged as means of increasing the effectiveness of South-South cooperation for the benefit of all developing countries. Those proposals emphasized improvement in accountability and transparency as necessary in order to maximize the beneficial impact of South-South cooperation.

21. In order to meet present and future challenges, the need for countries to forge new partnerships was emphasized. It was also suggested that multi-stakeholder efforts involving non-governmental organizations, the private sector and civil society should be increased for greater impact of South-South measures.

22. Innovative financing mechanisms for South-South cooperation were noted as instruments to promote South-South cooperation, and delegations called for their enhancement. Delegations further highlighted their commitment to South-South cooperation by pointing to their continued contribution to such South-South efforts as the Pérez-Guerrero Trust Fund and the India, Brazil and South Africa (IBSA) Dialogue Forum and its Facility for Poverty and Hunger Alleviation.

23. Throughout the debate, Member States noted that the 2009 High-level United Nations Conference on South-South Cooperation in Nairobi, and its significant outcome document contributed not only to strengthening and further invigorating South-South cooperation, but also to promoting integrated policies guaranteeing mutual respect, equity, cooperation and development among States. Thus, a number of delegations urged the full, effective implementation of the provisions of the Nairobi outcome document to help to intensify efforts towards the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals and other internationally agreed development goals.

24. Additionally, there were calls for greater political commitment in order to overcome the implementation gap that had plagued efforts to follow up on the recommendations of major United Nations conferences in the economic and social arenas. Delegations emphasized the importance of political will by all parties in order to fulfill the commitments and actions to achieve real progress in implementing the decisions in the Nairobi outcome document. Towards this end, a number of delegations noted the need for the preparation of a strategic framework for implementation in which the commitments of the Nairobi outcome document would be time-bound and measurable and that would include ways of ensuring transparency and accountability. Some Member States also requested that the framework of operational guidelines for the United Nations specialized agencies, funds and programmes be made clearer and easier to interpret and implement. Some delegations pointed to the need for further triangular cooperation in order to achieve the goals defined in the outcome document.

25. Delegations reiterated their appreciation for the initiatives taken by United Nations specialized agencies, funds and programmes to establish, within their respective mandates, new units and work programmes to support and promote South-South cooperation. A number of delegations stressed the important role of the United Nations in supporting South-South cooperation, including through financial support. They reiterated the call made in the Nairobi outcome document for the United Nations to take concrete measures to mainstream and streamline support for South-South and triangular cooperation throughout the United Nations system, ensuring effective coordination and consistency. That mainstreaming across the United Nations system, it was argued by one delegation, would serve as a catalyst to combat many global issues, including HIV/AIDS. Another delegation urged the inclusion of elements of South-South cooperation in all United Nations activities and treaties, including those concerning international security.

26. Some Member States saw the role of the United Nations in South-South cooperation from a capacity-building perspective and called upon the United Nations system to conduct research to identify areas where support for South-South cooperation would have the greatest impact. Delegations also stressed that the United Nations could play a prominent role in support of South-South cooperation by promoting capacity development.

27. Some delegations called on the United Nations specialized agencies, funds and programmes to enhance the capacities of developing countries and strengthen the capacities of regional and subregional organizations. It was noted that strengthening regional integration and improving networking among and across members of regional blocs would greatly benefit South-South cooperation efforts by enhancing regional and interregional cooperation. Delegations also called on the regional commissions to promote South-South and triangular cooperation through strengthening their technical, policy and research support for countries of their regions, indicating that the commissions could play a catalytic role in that regard.

28. UNDP, as the development arm of the United Nations system, was recognized by some delegations as central to the promotion of the decisions of the Nairobi outcome document, given the fact that the organization was well-positioned to assist the South in developing a framework and monitoring its implementation. Some Member States urged UNDP to expand its budget and maintain a strong field presence in developing countries, including middle-income countries, in order to foster an effective network of resident coordinators capable of providing direct support to South-South and triangular projects. Such efforts would enable UNDP to make more extensive use of the institutional capacities, policies, expertise and concrete experiences originating in developing countries. Increased involvement of the United Nations resident coordinator system in South-South efforts was needed so as to enable the United Nations system to be more responsive to specific country needs and to aid in the exchange of experience and in capacity-building.

29. A number of Member States made statements regarding the role of the Special Unit for South-South Cooperation. Several delegations commended the Special Unit for vigorously promoting and facilitating South-South cooperation globally and throughout the United Nations system. The importance of the Special Unit as a coordinating entity for mainstreaming South-South efforts among members of the United Nations system as well as for promoting and facilitating cooperation between developing and developed countries was emphasized. Delegations expressed confidence in the essential role of the Special Unit in the formulation of a guiding framework towards the implementation of the decisions of the Nairobi outcome document and called for the effective implementation of the fourth cooperation framework for South-South cooperation (2009-2011) as endorsed by the Executive Board of UNDP/United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA). Delegations also congratulated and endorsed the efforts of the Special Unit to facilitate the sharing and exchange of best practices and experiences in development, particularly through its successful launch and establishment of the South-South Global Assets and Technology Exchange and the Global South-South Development Expo, and commended the development of the Global South-South Development Academy. The assistance of the Special Unit was requested to help developing countries in responding to the current development challenges facing the South.

30. Some delegations, recognizing the special role of the Special Unit for South-South Cooperation, reiterated the need for more resources, both human and financial, for the Special Unit and invited the Executive Board of UNDP/UNFPA to strengthen the Special Unit accordingly and ensure that it would play a central role.
in South-South cooperation within the United Nations system, including through its role as the system-wide coordinator for South-South cooperation.

31. Some Member States welcomed the forthcoming High-level Event on South-South Cooperation and Capacity Development to be hosted by Colombia in March 2010, stating that the Event offered an important occasion to carry forward discussions on the principles of aid effectiveness and the practices of South-South cooperation. Other countries emphasized that the principles of aid effectiveness are not applicable in the context of South-South cooperation.

32. Some delegations also emphasized the importance of making a commitment to the global development agenda through support to the preparatory process leading up to the Fourth United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, to be held in Istanbul, in 2011.

33. Several delegations expressed support for the Government and people of Haiti following the recent earthquake on 12 January 2010 and pledged to provide assistance not only in the form of humanitarian aid, but also in South-South technical cooperation. That assistance was greatly needed and appreciated by the Government of Haiti, and the efforts of the South that rushed aid to Haiti were a sign of solidarity in line with the principles in the Nairobi outcome document. Further aid, in the form of technology transfers and support for capacity-building by the United Nations system, was also vital to the reconstruction efforts. It was hoped that those reconstruction efforts would aim to ensure sustainability and the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals in order to establish the necessary conditions for the promotion of sustainable economic and social development in Haiti.
